Lloyd W. Campbell, age 57, father of eight children and a member of the local Daughters of the American Legion, died at the hospital in Chicago, early Wednesday morning. His home was at 515 South Fifth Street.

Mr. Campbell was in poor health and was in charge of the army, but he had been in serious condition for the past six months and was taken to the hospital Tuesday night.

Surviving relatives are: three daughters, Trudy, May and Hazel; four sons, Lloyd, Jakes, Jack, and John; the mother; Mrs. Hazel and three sisters, Mrs. Ethel Thompson and Mrs. Helen Johnson and Mrs. Edna Moore of Galena.

The remains were to be brought to Kokene Wednesday morning to be taken to the hospital. Later they will be removed to the mother's home at 918 South Fifth Street.

Compensation is lost.

That decided for several years, and then the National American Legion began its campaign to get a higher compensation. Campbell was one of the veterans who received the first aid, and his compensation was raised to $87.50 a month. About the same time, the state of the nation was greatly improved, and his family became more active. He was hardly able to move.

Legion loan aid.

Although he had never been a member of the American Legion, the organization became interested in his case and granted him a loan of $75 a month. In all, the organization had loaned him $3,000. The loan was all paid off, and the family now has $500 in the bank.

A few weeks later, the family received notice from the Legion that the compensation would be reduced to $50 a month. This was a great blow to the family, and they were forced to sell their home.

The American Legion had offered to pay the family $1,000 a month, but the family was unwilling to take the money. They preferred to work and save money to pay off the loan.

The American Legion has paid off the loan, and the family is now free of debt. The family is now planning to make a trip to see the places they have always wanted to see.

The story of Lloyd Campbell is just one of many stories of veterans who have been helped by the Legion. The Legion has helped thousands of veterans and their families in the past, and it continues to help veterans today.

The Legion is a great organization that helps veterans and their families. If you or someone you know is a veteran, please consider joining the American Legion.
